

MALDIVES ITINERARY

4 NIGHTS/ 5 DAYS

The wide and deep blue sea, white sandy beaches, palm trees and turquoise reefs makes this amazingly beautiful nation one of the tempting destinations for great holidays. The island is located in-between the trading route of the Indian Ocean. Visitors from the neighbouring regions and across the globe, visit to see the mesmerising beauty of Maldives and experience their cultures that a marked effect has been left in the Maldivian people, the language, beliefs, arts, and attitudes.

The country is made up of 1,190 coral islands formed around 26 natural ring-like atolls, spread over 90,000 square kilometres. The Maldives lies in two rows of atolls in the Indian Ocean, just across the equator. The looks of the Maldivian people may differ from one atoll to the other, attributing to the genes passed on by South and Southeast Asians, Africans, and Arabians. The Maldivian language -Dhivehi, differs in dialect in some regions in the south of Maldives, possibly due to the secluded nature and subsistent ways of island life.

Each atoll in the Maldives is made of a coral reef encircling a lagoon, with deep channels dividing the reef ring. A string of islands take their places among this atoll ring; each island has its own reef encircling the island lagoon. The reefs of the islands, alive with countless types of underwater creatures and vibrant corals, protect the islands from wind and wave action of the surrounding vast oceans. This unique structure of reefs and channels makes navigation almost impossible for the passer-by without sufficient information about these waters.

The mixing of cultures is very much seen in Maldivian arts. The music played with the local bodu-beru (big-drum) resembles that of African drumming. The dhoni (a unique Maldivian sailboat) is an art form itself built with skilled craftsmanship, with significant similarities to the Arabian Dows.

The people of the islands are widely dispersed across the atolls, with about 200 inhabited islands. About 90 islands are developed as tourist resort and the rest are uninhabited or used for agriculture and other livelihood purposes.
